

Exercise 10: Mitochondrial Respiration and Oxidative Phosphorylation

1. Before the experiment, summarize the function of each:

Glucose: It serves as the primary source of energy for the cell. It is broken down into pyruvate, which enters the mitochondria and undergoes the Citric Acid Cycle. This cycle produces electron carriers (NADH and FADH<sub>2</sub>) that are used in the electron transport chain to generate ATP. Glucose is also used for biosynthesis of various cellular components and for energy storage in the form of glycogen.

Pyruvate: It is the product of glycolysis and enters the mitochondria. It can be converted into acetyl-CoA, which enters the Citric Acid Cycle. Pyruvate can also be converted into lactate under anaerobic conditions.

Acetyl-CoA: It is the product of the Citric Acid Cycle and enters the electron transport chain. It is oxidized to CO<sub>2</sub> and H<sub>2</sub>O, releasing energy that is used to produce ATP.

Electron Carriers (NADH and FADH<sub>2</sub>): These molecules carry electrons from the Citric Acid Cycle to the electron transport chain. They are oxidized to NAD+ and FAD, which are then used to produce ATP.

2. What is the purpose of the experiment?

The purpose of the experiment is to measure the rate of mitochondrial respiration.

3. What is the experimental design?

The experimental design involves measuring the rate of oxygen consumption in a closed system.

4. What is the expected result?

The expected result is that the rate of oxygen consumption will increase when the substrate is added.

5. The results of the experiment are summarized in the table below:

Time	0 minutes
Glucose added	Glucose added at 10 minutes
Time	Glucose added at 10 minutes

6. What is the conclusion?

The results of the experiment show that the rate of mitochondrial respiration increases when glucose is added.

7. What is the significance of the results?

The results of the experiment show that the rate of mitochondrial respiration is dependent on the availability of glucose. This is significant because it shows that glucose is a key component of cellular energy metabolism.

8. What are the limitations of the experiment?

The experiment has several limitations. First, it only measures the rate of oxygen consumption, which is not a direct measure of ATP production. Second, the experiment is performed in a closed system, which may not accurately reflect the conditions of a cell. Third, the experiment is performed in a test tube, which may not accurately reflect the conditions of a cell. Finally, the experiment is performed in a test tube, which may not accurately reflect the conditions of a cell.

9. How do the results of the experiment relate to the function of the mitochondria?

Time	Time at which
Glucose added at 10 minutes	Glucose added at 10 minutes. The rate of oxygen consumption increases when glucose is added, indicating that glucose is a key component of cellular energy metabolism.
Glucose added at 10 minutes	Glucose added at 10 minutes. The rate of oxygen consumption increases when glucose is added, indicating that glucose is a key component of cellular energy metabolism.
