Joseph S. Levine, Kenneth R. Miller, 1998 Biology Sylvia S. Mader, 2000-07 Evolution and Selection of Quantitative Traits Bruce Walsh, Michael Lynch, 2018-06-21 Quantitative traits be they morphological or physiological characters aspects of behavior or genome level features such as the amount of RNA or protein expression for a specific gene usually show considerable variation within and among populations Quantitative genetics also referred to as the genetics of complex traits is the study of such characters and is based on mathematical models of evolution in which many genes influence the trait and in which non genetic factors may also be important Evolution and Selection of Quantitative Traits presents a holistic treatment of the subject showing the interplay between theory and data with extensive discussions on statistical issues relating to the estimation of the biologically relevant parameters for these models Quantitative genetics is viewed as the bridge between complex mathematical models of trait evolution and real world data and the authors have clearly framed their treatment as such This is the second volume in a planned trilogy that summarizes the modern field of quantitative genetics informed by empirical observations from wide ranging fields agriculture evolution ecology and human biology as well as population genetics statistical theory mathematical modeling genetics and genomics Whilst volume 1 1998 dealt with the genetics of such traits the main focus of volume 2 is on their evolution with a special emphasis on detecting selection ranging from the use of genomic and historical data through to ecological field data and examining its consequences

The Population Ecology of Interest Representation Virginia Gray, David Lowery, 1996 This examination of lobbying communities explores how interest group populations are constructed and how they influence politics and public policy By examining how populations of interest groups are comprised this work fills an important gap between existing theories of the origins of individual interest groups and studies of interest group influence The population ecology model of interest communities developed here builds on insights first developed in population biology and later employed by organizational ecologists The model's central premise is that it is the environmental forces confronting interest organizations that most directly shape the contours of interest populations After examining the demography of interest organizations in the fifty American states the population ecology model is used to account for variations in the density and diversity of their interest communities the nature of competition among similar interest organizations to establish viable niches and the impact of alternative configurations of interest communities on the legislative process and the policies it produces These empirical findings suggest that the environment of interest communities is highly constraining limiting their size composition and potential impact on politics Virginia Gray is Professor of Political Science University of Minnesota David Lowery is Burton Craige Professor of Political Science University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill
