

Constitutional Era Reading Assignment

Standards – VA/US History

SOL VUS.5

1. After the American Revolution, Americans had to create a new plan for government. The new nation will make the Articles of Confederation first, but because of weaknesses, it will eventually be replaced with the Constitution.

Articles of Confederation		The Constitution of the United States
Created by American political leaders who were fearful of a powerful central government like England's.		Established a government that shared power between the national government and state governments, protected rights of states, and provided a system for orderly change through amendments to the Constitution itself.
Weaknesses:		Key Issues	Resolution/Compromise
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> provided for a weak national government no power to tax or regulate commerce among the states no common currency Each state only one vote regardless of size no executive or judicial branch 		Federal power and states' rights	Federal system allows for two levels of government, Federal and State, each with different powers. When State laws contradict Federal laws, Federal laws wins, but States are still given many powers to govern many thing for themselves.
		Large and small states	Large states wanted representation to be based on population, small states wanted equal representation. The Great Compromise, a/k/a Connecticut Compromise, provided for a bicameral (or two house) legislature, the House of Representatives is based on population and the Senate with equal representation.
		Southern and Northern states	Northern states had a larger population than Southern states, so slaves would be partially counted for purposes of representation to make thing more equal. Slavery would not be abolished, but the slave trade would end.
		Threat of a too-powerful central government	Division of the Federal government into three co-equal branches, legislative, executive, and judicial with each branch having "checks and balances" on the other branches would ensure that no one branch would dominate and power would not be centralized. Federal government powers are limited to only those granted specifically in the Constitution.

2. The Constitutional Convention was attended by 55 men; two of the most important were George Washington and James Madison. Explain the roles of these two men at the constitutional convention.

George Washington	James Madison
<ul style="list-style-type: none"> Chairman of the Convention (presided) but seldom participated in the debates lent his prestige to the proceedings 	<ul style="list-style-type: none"> "Father of the Constitution" often led the debate kept the best record authored the "Virginia Plan," which proposed three separate branches (legislative, executive, judicial) later authored the Bill of Rights
