As the chief photographer for the Sidney Daily News, I have worked the past ten years capturing provocative moments in the lives of small-town America. I have also found beauty in capturing the bold and colorful events as well as the vulnerable, quiet moments of a small town in America. I created this book as a kind of time capsule to hold a visual glimpse of a time and place in Ohio. The images captured include an armed standoff, a dad in the military surprising his son, Civil War re-enactors, a dog being rescued from a fire, a man being rescued after his boat sank, kids playing in a flooded town, and sports such as basketball, football, volleyball, and baseball. Shelby County is rich with amazing and inspiring people. These are people that don't know how to stop helping others. They volunteer their time and resources to make Shelby County a better place. I have found it exceptionally rewarding to bring attention to some of these great people through my photojournalism. Creative Being Judith Kurka Nagel, 1991-04. Capturing a
