

PEELING TANBARK
MENDOCINO
AREA IN 1896

The Briceland plant was quite a large operation with many camps in the woods where the men peeled the bark. There was a cook tent, a sleeping tent and sleeping tents for the men. Generally, a wife of one of the men cooked for the camp crew. The camps were usually located too far from Briceland for the men to come and go daily. When the end of the season arrived, the crew would leave on Saturday afternoon for Briceland and their nearby homes. They would return to their jobs early Monday morning.

The peeling process was strictly a seasonal operation. The peeling usually started the latter part of May or when the flow of sap was moving upward. The peeling was over as a rule by the middle of July. This made it necessary to put on large crews to take full advantage of every month. Once a tree was cut, the bark had to be peeled immediately. It could not even be allowed to stand over a lunch hour or it would be too difficult to remove. If the weather turned real cold with a sharp north wind, the peeling was halted as the sap flow was affected.
