

General Shop Safety

Shop work can be safe, enjoyable and productive, IF some very basic and simple rules are followed. Most of the rules are common-sense, but failure to follow them will greatly increase the chance of injury. The shop is not the place to be in a hurry or have an "it won't happen to me" attitude. Commit these rules to habit and your work experiences will be safer.

1. Always Wear Appropriate Safety Equipment

Safety Glasses are the most important piece of safety equipment. There are many styles of safety glasses, but all share the same features: impact resistant lenses and side screens to protect against dust and debris created by power tools. Put them on when working with equipment and don't remove them until after the power is off and all motion has stopped. Standard eye glasses are not acceptable. Safety glasses must meet or exceed ANSI Z87.1-2003 requirements. Eyesight is too important to take chances.

Hearing Protection is required when working with loud power tools and machinery such as routers, surface planers, and joiners. There are two common types: expandable ear plugs and ear muffs. Ear Muffs provide slightly better protection, but may be viewed as wildy and cumbersome. Some woodworkers will even employ both types simultaneously. Consistent use of hearing protection will help prevent long-term hearing loss.

Dust and Respirator Masks are important when using sanders, routers and other power tools that can generate a lot of dust and fine debris. When using these types of tools, workers may wear a dust mask to keep particulates from entering the lungs and airways. When spraying varnish or paint a respirator is a better choice, providing protection from any harmful chemical effects, if appropriate safety programs are in place (ask the instructor/supervisor).

Face Shields are advised, in addition to using safety glasses, when using high-speed equipment, such as a lathe or drill press, since flying debris may be generated. Shields are comfortable, can be flipped up when not needed, and will keep most of the flying materials away from the face. They too must meet or exceed ANSI Z87.1-2003 requirements.

2. Wear Appropriate Clothing

Avoid loose-fitting clothing which could become entangled in a saw blade, cutting head, or other moving part. Comfortable, long-sleeved shirts and long pants combined with good steel-toed work shoes will each provide a layer of protection. A shop apron is also advisable.

Remove jewelry before beginning work. Chains, bracelets, and even close fitting rings and watches can snag on equipment resulting in serious injury.
