Teenagers and computers

It is virtually impossible to escape the influence of the media these days, and particularly if you are a teenager with access not just to television and radio, but also the Internet. At all times of the day and night, advertisers look upon teenagers as a target group whose tastes and needs are bound to be matched by them through their advertisements. Advertisers and marketing people have become adept at reaching the teenage mind, making young people believe that they need to own certain items in order to be accepted by their peer group, or simply to look cool.

Teenagers: a driving force

Advertising responds to young people's delight in what is new by developing sophisticated and innovative, often humorous advertisements which can be seen on television and cinema screens and on billboards around our towns and cities. The tastes of this generation of young people have had an impact on advertisers worldwide. However, it is the energy of the young, above all, that has influenced the world of marketing and has kept it on the move, pushing the creative boundaries to become almost an art form. That is the power of young people.
