**Chapter 21 Review: Amino Acids, Proteins, and Enzymes****

**Overview:****

Chapter 21 delves into the fundamental building blocks of life: amino acids, proteins, and enzymes. These molecules play crucial roles in various biological processes, from structural support to catalyzing biochemical reactions. The chapter begins by exploring the structure and properties of amino acids, the monomeric units that comprise proteins. It then delves into the primary, secondary, tertiary, and quaternary structures of proteins, elucidating how these levels of organization dictate protein function. Lastly, the chapter discusses enzymes, specialized proteins that accelerate chemical reactions, and examines the factors influencing enzyme activity.

**Key Concepts:****

1. **Amino Acids:****

- Understanding the structure of amino acids, including the central carbon atom, amino group, carboxyl group, hydrogen atom, and variable R group.
- Classification of amino acids based on the properties of their R groups (side chains), such as acidic, basic, polar, and nonpolar.
- Importance of chirality in amino acids and the distinction between L-amino acids and D-amino acids in biological systems.

2. **Proteins:****

- Primary structure: The linear sequence of amino acids in a polypeptide chain and its significance in determining the overall protein structure.
- Secondary structure: Formation of  $\alpha$ -helices and  $\beta$ -sheets through hydrogen bonding between backbone atoms, contributing to protein stability.
- Tertiary structure: Three-dimensional folding of the polypeptide chain, driven by interactions between R groups, leading to the functional conformation.
- Quaternary structure: Assembly of multiple polypeptide subunits to form a functional protein complex, often associated with cofactors, prosthetic groups, or structural proteins.

3. **Enzymes:****

- Enzyme-substrate specificity and the induced-fit model of enzyme-substrate interaction.
