Landforms and Oceans

Landforms and oceans (Earth's oceans) and land can be affected in constructive ways and destructive ways by natural processes.

Constructive - Processes that create landforms (deposition, landfills, volcanic eruptions, floods)

Destructive - Processes that destroy landforms (weathering, erosion, landslides, volcanic eruptions, earthquakes, floods) Natural processes that can affect Earth's oceans and land include:

Weathering - Weathering is a term used to describe processes that break down rocks at or near the surface of the earth. Weathering can be either physical or chemical. These processes cause the surface of the earth to dissolve, decompose, and break into smaller pieces.

Weathering can be caused by:

- 1. Water
- 2. Plants (roots break apart rocks)
- 3. Temperature changes (water freezes in cracks of rocks)

Erosion

Erosion is the movement of sediment and soil by wind, water, ice, and gravity.

Deposition

Deposition is the dropping, or depositing, of sediments by water, wind, or ice. It builds new land on Earth's surface, like a delta at the end of a river or the pile up of a sand dune in the desert. Shells on the beach are deposition by ocean waves. Deposition begins with a "T" and Dunes and Delta begin with a "D"

Coast

Weathering will break rocks down

Erosion moves it all around

Put it here and there with a flow

Now we have deposition

The Evolution of American Educational Technology Paul Saettler,2004-03-01 The primary purpose of this book is to trace the theoretical methodological foundations of American educational technology It must be emphasized that this work is essentially as history of the process of educational technology rather than of products in the form of devices or media Although media have played an important role in educational technology the reader should not lose sight of the central process which characterizes and underlies the true historical meaning and function of educational technology Moreover the assumption is made that all current theory methodology and practice rests upon the heritage of the past Indeed a common problem in the field has been the failure in many instances to take adequate account of past history in planning for the present or the future A related purpose of this book is to provide a selective survey of research in educational technology as it relates to the American public schools Such research reviews are not intended to be comprehensive but were included because of their historical importance and their relevance in understanding the process of educational technology
