

Procedure

1. Prepare a boiling water bath for use in step 11: Half-fill a 150-mL beaker with water, add a boiling stone, and heat the beaker on a hot plate at a medium setting.
2. Label five weighing dishes and obtain 0.2–0.3 g samples of each solid in the appropriate weighing dish. Record the color and appearance of each solid in the data table.
3. Test the volatility and odor of each solid by wafting any vapors to your nose with your hand. Record all observations in the data table.
4. Test the conductivity of each solid by touching the wires of the conductivity tester directly to the solid. Record the conductivity of each sample in the data table.
5. Obtain a 24-well reaction plate and add a small amount of each solid (about the size of a grain of rice) to separate wells A1–A5, in the order shown in the data table.
6. Add about 20 drops of water to each well. Stir each mixture and observe whether the solid dissolves in water. Record the solubility (soluble, partially soluble, or insoluble) in the data table.
7. For water-soluble substances only: Determine the conductivity of the aqueous solution by placing the wires directly into the liquid. Record the results in the data table.
8. Label five small test tubes or a ceramic spot plate and add a small amount of each solid, about the size of a grain of rice, to separate test tubes.
9. Add about 20 drops of hexane to each test tube. Stir each mixture and observe whether the solid dissolves in hexane. Record the results in the data table.
10. Obtain a large, disposable aluminum evaporating dish or Pyrex® watch glass and place a small, pea-sized amount of each solid in separate locations on the dish.
11. Set the dish on top of the boiling water bath and heat the solids for 1–2 minutes. Observe whether any of the solids melt and record the observations in the data table.
12. For solids that did not melt at the boiling water bath temperature: Place a small, pea-sized amount of each solid in a clean and dry, Pyrex® test tube. Using a test tube holder, heat the test tube in a burner flame for 1–2 minutes. Record observations in the data table.
13. Test the brittleness of each solid by placing a small sample in the mortar designated for it and grinding with the pestle. Record the observations in the data table.
14. (Optional) Test the hardness of the mineral samples by trying to scratch them with a fingernail, a penny, and a nail. Record observations on the data sheet.
