Space-Time Perspectives on Early Colonial Moquegua Prudence M. Rice, 2013-11-02 In this rich study of the construction and reconstruction of a colonized landscape Prudence M Rice takes an implicit political ecology approach in exploring encounters of colonization in Moquegua a small valley of southern Peru Building on theories of spatiality spatialization and place she examines how politically mediated human interaction transformed the physical landscape the people who inhabited it and the resources and goods produced in this poorly known area Space Time Perspectives on Early Colonial Moquegua looks at the encounters between existing populations and newcomers from successive waves of colonization from indigenous expansion states Wari Tiwanaku and Inka to the foreign Spaniards and the way each group re spatialized the landscape according to its own political and economic ends Viewing these spatializations from political economic and religious perspectives Rice considers both the ideological and material occurrences Concluding with a special focus on the multiple space time considerations involved in Spanish inspired ceramics from the region Space Time Perspectives on Early Colonial Moquegua integrates the local and rural with the global and urban in analyzing the events and processes of colonialism It is a vital contribution to the literature of Andean studies and will appeal to students and scholars of archaeology historical
