12 Effective Strategies for Improving Reading Skills

1 FINDING MAIN IDEA

Every paragraph and every piece of writing has a main idea.

This main idea is often expressed in either the first sentence of the paragraph, or the last paragraph is a longer piece of writing. Sometimes the main idea is found in the last sentence of either the paragraph or the piece, and sometimes it's not expressed so directly and you only find it by thinking about what connects all the ideas in the piece or paragraph together.

2 RECALLING FACTS & DETAILS

Facts and details are sentences that help explain the main idea.

Often they express the what, when, where, why and how of a piece of writing, adding detail and showing out the ideas in a piece more fully. Facts and details often help describe a person, place or thing, support an opinion and opinion, or give you a better idea of how to do something.

3 UNDERSTANDING SEQUENCE

Sequence refers to the order in which things happen in a piece.

While many stories are told directly in the order in which things happen, sometimes this order is flipped or rearranged. Words like next, first, second, then, last, finally, before and after can give hints as to the way a story is working in terms of sequence. Other clues can include references to time or things that happened earlier or later in a piece.

4 RECOGNISING CAUSE & EFFECT

The cause is why something happens, and the effect is what happens.

They are not always stated in that order and often the reader will have to determine just what happened and why it did so in a piece.

Sometimes this relationship is indicated with clue words such as since, because, therefore, result, so, as a result of, then, and as a consequence.

5 COMPARING & CONTRASTING

Why are some things alike and some things different?

Comparing tells the way two or more things are alike, and contrasting tells why two or more things are different. Writers often use metaphors and similes to compare and contrast, as well as clue words such as both, same, alike, similar, different, unlike, etc. Thinking out the relationship between two or more things involves writing at a deeper understanding of just what they are.

6 MAKING PREDICTIONS

Predictions involve making a guess about what might happen next.

The reader analyses the information they are given in a passage and uses it to determine what is most likely to happen next given all the facts and details presented to them.

The best predictions combine the personal knowledge the reader has about what is likely with the facts and details they have gleaned from their reading.

7 FINDING WORD MEANING IN CONTEXT

How do you find the meaning of a word you don't know?

The ability to determine the meaning of a word unknown to the reader by looking at the words and ideas around it is a vital skill. Words around an unknown word often offer context clues as to the meaning of the unknown word. One useful technique for working out a word's meaning might involve comparing it with another word for use if the sentence makes sense that way.

8 DRAWING CONCLUSIONS MAKING INFERENCES

How do you know if things that aren't directly stated in the text?

Drawing conclusions and making inferences involves taking what is reader known (facts) and the details presented in a passage to read between the lines and arrive at things that are not directly stated in a text. This means jumping to a conclusion or inference that is reasonable given what is stated and what is logically possible.

9 DISTINGUISHING BETWEEN FACT & OPINION

Facts are the proven, objective part.

Facts are statements that can be proven or tested; opinions are what someone feels or believes.

Writers often use facts to back up what they feel or are trying to get the reader to believe. Facts can contain dates, numbers or information. An opinion might be informed by facts, but it's still an opinion. Opinions can include clue words such as feel, think, believe, guess or want.

10 IDENTIFYING AUTHOR'S PURPOSE

Why did the author write this piece of writing in this way?

Authors always write with a purpose. They might want to persuade, describe, entertain or explain to the reader.

Passages with a lot of facts are often designed to describe or explain, whereas passages that are fun to read with jokes or personal stories are often trying to entertain.

Persuasive writing often contains opinions or tries to get readers to agree to something.

11 INTERPRETING FIGURATIVE LANGUAGE

Figurative language uses words to create pictures.

Figurative language states something indirectly rather than outright. Some of figurative language include simile, metaphor and idiom.

A simile compares two unlike things by using "like" or "as"; a metaphor does so by saying that one thing is another.

Idioms are common phrases whose words have a different meaning to their usual literal one.

12 SUMMARISING

A good summary gets to the heart of a piece of writing.

Summarising involves telling the important ideas in a passage without getting bogged down in unnecessary details.

A good summary gets to the heart of a piece of writing, demonstrating an understanding of it and how the main idea(s) connect with each other. The best summaries include only the most important things, but make sense without including any other details.
