

SAFETY TIPS FOR VEHICLE MAINTENANCE

Brakes

Most of us don't notice our wiper wear until the first rainfall of the season. Remember the holiday wipe - check your wipers on each holiday and get into a routine. A spare pair of wiper blades will make you more inclined to change them at the first sign of too much wear.

Use the two-L's of look and listen. Do you hear grinding, growling, or screeching? This can be a sign that your brake rotors are crying for help! Take a look at your brakes, there should be at least 1/4" (stack of four nickels). Getting your rotors turned can extend your brake life and sometimes it's time for a change.

Wipers

Car Oil

To test your tires, try the penny trick. Place a penny in the tread of your tire. Have Lincoln facing you and pointed downward. If you can see the top of Lincoln's head, it may be time for new tires. While your at your tires, make sure to check tire pressure. Pro tip is to always check your tires after they have been sitting "cooling" for 3 hours.

Fuel in your car is essential to driving, but your car's oil is what makes the wheels go-round. The proverbial "every 3,000 miles" is considered to be overkill by many mechanics. Changing your oil every 5,000 to 7,500 is adequate for most vehicles.

Tires

Battery

Fuel, check; oil, check; battery? The electrical powerhouse for your vehicle can be one of the most overlooked parts of this checklist. Doing battery checks on your car battery can save you time and money!

The most evident signs of a battery replacement are if the battery looks "bloated" or bulging in certain areas, or if upon starting your car the engine cranking seems a little more sluggish than normal.
