

Ch 24 Conceptual Questions

<https://openstax.org/books/college-physics/pages/24-conceptual-questions>

13. How do fluorescent soap residues make clothing look "brighter and whiter" in outdoor light? Would this be effective in candlelight?

Fluorescent soaps residue glow in some characteristic wavelengths when they are exposed to ultraviolet light, which could be sunlight. There is a lot of ultraviolet radiation in outdoor light so clothes washed with such soaps appear brighter and whiter. Candle flame is not hot enough to give out ultraviolet radiation so it would not be effective.

14. Give an example of resonance in the reception of electromagnetic waves.

One example is heating food up in the microwave when the water molecules resonate with the microwaves.

15. Illustrate that the size of details of an object that can be detected with electromagnetic waves is related to their wavelength, by comparing details observable with two different types (for example, radar and visible light or infrared and X-rays).

Gamma rays have the shorter wave and have color while radio waves have the longer wavelengths.

16. Why don't buildings block radio waves as completely as they do visible light?

The wavelengths of radio waves are bigger than the wavelengths of visible waves so visible waves are blocked and radio waves are not.

20. Give an example of energy carried by an electromagnetic wave.

One example is sunlight.
