THE KITE RUNNER

Chapter 11: Answer Key

1. What is the physical and temporal setting of this chapter?

Prairieville, California, United States during the 1970s-1980s

2. Amir notes that America is "never a different thing to him, just his. Unlike Elton, who has experienced the United States differently?"

Amir says it's a place that feels so heavy, his hometown, while Elton states it is a place he knows far from Amir, the excitement that helps to see clearly, with one exception for the others: the United States is an attempt at a fresh start. For Elton, the United States is a place where he can finally get away from his past. The reason difference is that Elton's "moving" is an act of self-interest and self-preservation whereas Amir's moving is an act of self-sacrifice and denial (129).

3. Consider Amir's description of white America. Pay attention to page 136. Take a look at the language Amir uses at this moment and determine what Amir's perspective on America has (be positive? Negative? Neutral)? Something else?

Answers may vary. Readers may consider the connotations of the word "downing," "glorious," and "new" as words that reflect Amir's positive view on America. However, readers may also read its connotation that this "moving" isn't "downing" it. America is a powerful force that offers an avenue to build upon. The questions remain: at our self-destructive, our past, our mistakes, and our wrongdoings, what happens to the people that we ignore about the past and the experiences that shaped us into who we are?

4. What were the major events considered to toward the end of this chapter?

General Taheri and his daughter Soraya (138-140)
