

The Communist Manifesto

Commissioned by the Communist League in London and written by Karl Marx and Friedrich Engels in 1847-1848, this pamphlet set out the fundamental principles and tactics of the nascent Communist movement of the period, the "spectre" haunting all of Europe.

Unlike many other works of the time, the Communist Manifesto remains one of the most influential works of literature ever published. Despite being written almost 170 years ago, the ideas, method, and political lessons contained within it remain remarkably fresh. Although a few references to political figures of the time and some (but not all) of the concrete political demands put forward at the end of chapter 2 have been superseded by events, the great bulk of the text feels as if it could have been written only yesterday, with its explanation of the crushing power of the capitalist world market, the commodification of the labour and abilities of human beings, and the ever-growing divide between the rich and poor. Regardless of its date of publication, the Communist Manifesto is still very much a vital weapon in the arsenal of revolutionaries all over the world.

Arguably, in its message the Communist Manifesto is even more relevant today than when it was written. In 1848, Europe itself stood on the threshold of a series of democratic revolutions which would shake the old Absolutist order, but could not yet bring the working class to power. Today, with the global capitalist system in deep crisis, the Manifesto's final line has never felt more powerful and urgent:

Workers of all countries, unite!

Chapter 1: Bourgeois and Proletarians

For Marx and Engels, "the [written] history of all hitherto existing society is the history of class struggles". In this chapter they set out a sweeping history of class society, in particular the struggle of the bourgeoisie against the rotten feudal system, and explain how the bourgeoisie, having taken power in one country, is forced by its own system to revolutionise production on a world scale and with this, produces "its own grave-diggers": the proletariat.

Study questions:

How do Marxists define "class"?

What are the bourgeoisie and proletariat?

How did capitalism come into being?

What relationship exists between economic development and the political struggle? Can we find examples of this in society today?

What do Marx and Engels mean when they write, "The bourgeoisie, historically, has played a most revolutionary part"?

How does this chapter predict globalisation?
