Charity Sucks Iqbal Wahhab,2016-10-20 In the wake of recent scandals concerning charities such as Kids Company and BeatBullying as well as the wave of suspicion they have generated about the third sector as a whole celebrated restaurateur Iqbal Wahhab offers a scathing critique of the cosiness between government and charity and proposes that the solution lies in business Indeed he believes we are entering a post philanthropy age where social entrepreneurs are better placed to sustainably solve our problems than the outdated and ineffective donations model With social mobility on the wane and inequalities widening he argues the convention of paying taxes to provide a welfare state that fixes the problems of the poor and infirm is now considered a myth The problem is that charities aren t evolving in the way businesses have to They expand by the amount of hope and faith by which they can convince largely uninformed if well meaning donors and philanthropists to finance them Businesses expand through success and success wins over hope Put simply Wahhab argues charity sucks because business does it better

Partners for Good Tom Levitt,2016-05-13 After a century in which charities suspected the motives of cynical business people and business people dismissed the contributions of amateur volunteers the two sectors are coming together today as never before The third sector has increased its business capacity through the experience gained from a decade of providing commissioned services to the public sector Society today expects employers to do more to engage with both communities and good causes and the business case for doing so can be and is being made But business also realises that charities do conscience better than they can and so co working is increasingly being sought In Partners for Good Tom Levitt points the way to successful partnerships at local national and international levels There is now even an agreed international standard on what constitutes the social responsibility obligations of organisations operating in all sectors in all parts of the world over and above international legal frameworks Sustainability today refers to the triple bottom line financial social environmental rather than being a green concept alone On the down side grants and other funding opportunities provided by governments to the third sector over the last ten years are suddenly ending and support structures are disappearing The incentives for forging successful and sustainable win win partnerships between businesses and charities in the new Big Society are therefore high however demanding the time scale on offer
