

Using the Hemocytometer

LAB

Learning Objectives

- 1. Calculate cell concentration from hemocytometer counts (number of cells).
- 2. Calculate % of cells in a population of a mixture based on counting cells in separate chambers.

Background

Hemocytometers are the standard instruments used to measure cell concentration. Hemocytometers consist of two counting chambers. The upper chamber is a thick, polished glass chamber that allows cells to move freely. A hemocytometer is a specialized slide with a known area, usually 1 cm², over which the counting chamber holds the sample, which can then be counted.

The counting cell will be counted and the number of cells is reported as cells per cm². Hemocytometers are a valuable instrument for measuring cell concentration. However, they have two limitations: they require cell counting and cell counting is time-consuming and labor-intensive. Additionally, they are not suitable for counting cells in a mixture of cells. The hemocytometer can count cells in a mixture of cells, but it is not suitable for counting cells in a mixture of cells.

Part A: Sample Counting Technique

Counting cells with the hemocytometer is a simple task. The steps are as follows:

Using the Hemocytometer

1. Prepare a cell suspension. The cell suspension is a suspension of cells in a liquid medium. The suspension should be prepared by mixing cells with a liquid medium. The suspension should be prepared by mixing cells with a liquid medium.

2. Load the hemocytometer. The hemocytometer is a specialized slide with a known area, usually 1 cm², over which the counting chamber holds the sample, which can then be counted.

1. Prepare the hemocytometer. The hemocytometer is a specialized slide with a known area, usually 1 cm², over which the counting chamber holds the sample, which can then be counted.
2. Calculate the average cell concentration. The average cell concentration is calculated by dividing the total number of cells by the total area of the hemocytometer.
3. Calculate the cell concentration. The cell concentration is calculated by multiplying the average cell concentration by the area of the hemocytometer.
