Conflict Transformation Through School A Curriculum For Sustainable Peace:

Conflict Transformation Through School Jeremy Cunningham, 2015 Civil wars inflict terrible suffering and impede world development Conflict transformation is the process of changing the relationships attitudes interests discourses and underlying structures that encourage violent political conflict Despite relatively little empirical evidence the role of education is thought to be significant in building sustainable peace Getting children into school is vitally important but what do they learn once they get there This book explores the ways in which the school curriculum can contribute to or impede conflict transformation Using a framework based on truth seeking reconciliation and inclusive citizenship the role of the school curriculum is examined through a qualitative case study of curriculum in seven schools in northern Uganda as it emerges from a twenty year civil war Their heads teachers and students build a picture of schools that face great challenges but are making a distinctive contribution to sustainable peace The framework is used to investigate the school curriculum in three other countries that have suffered civil conflict Cambodia Rwanda and Northern Ireland As a curriculum model for reducing the risk of re eruption of civil wars it is essential reading for practitioners in the field of education in emergencies and for graduate students of development studies and of comparative education in universities around the world Schooling for Peaceful Development in Post-Conflict Societies Clive Harber, 2019-05-02 This book explores how and if formal education affects peacebuilding in post conflict societies As schooling is often negatively implicated in violent conflict the author highlights the widely expressed need to build back better and transform schooling by changing both its structures and processes and its curriculum Drawing upon research from a wide range of post conflict developing societies including Cambodia Colombia and Kenya the author examines whether there is any empirical support for the idea that schooling can be transformed so it can contribute to more peaceful and democratic societies In doing so the author reveals how the myth of building back better is perpetuated by academics and international organisations and explains why formal education in post conflict developing societies is so impervious to radical change This important volume will appeal to students and scholars of education in post conflict societies (Re)Constructing Memory: Education, Identity, and Conflict Michelle J. Bellino, James H. Williams, 2017-02-08 How do schools protect young people and call on the youngest citizens to respond to violent conflict and division operating outside and sometimes within school walls What kinds of curricular representations of conflict contribute to the construction of national identity and what kinds of encounters challenge presumed boundaries between us and them Through contemporary and historical case studies drawn from Cambodia Egypt Northern Ireland Peru and Rwanda among others this collection explores how societies experiencing armed conflict and its aftermath imagine education as a space for forging collective identity peace and stability and national citizenship In some contexts the erasure of conflict and the homogenization of difference are central to shaping national identities and attitudes In other cases collective memory of conflict functions as a central organizing frame through which citizenship and national identity are re constructed with embedded messages about who belongs and how social belonging is achieved The essays in this volume illuminate varied and complex inter relationships between education conflict and national identity while accounting for ways in which policymakers teachers youth and community members replicate resist and transform conflict through everyday interactions in educational spaces

Pushing the Boundaries of Human Rights Education Benjamin Mallon, Fionnuala Waldron, Caitríona Ní Cassaithe, 2023-12-01 This book pushes the theoretical boundaries of human rights education engaging with complex questions of climate related injustices re imagining education through a decolonising lens and problematising the relationship between rights and responsibilities It presents international studies of HRE in varied contexts e g Uganda Japan Ireland to explore the views and experiences of children who identify as human rights defenders initial teachers understandings of concepts such as teacher agency in conflict affected settings and the barriers to children s political agency The book also highlights HRE in practice including participatory research with very young children as co researchers and realising rights through play pedagogies creative writing approaches and picturebooks An HRE lens is also brought to bear on emerging subjects such as relationships and sexuality education and well being Aimed at educators researchers and practitioners and engaging with a range of concepts contexts and contemporary challenges this book offers new insights into HRE particularly in the context of issues relating to children s rights education and participation
