CRITICAL RESPONSE PAPER

First, choose one of the following important theatrical tracts, all in Brandt:

Henri Bergson, "The Comic in Situations" (pp. 25-34)
Howard Barker, "Theatre without a Conscience" (pp. 55-61)
"The London Controversy; Tynan v. Ionesco" (pp. 208-214)
Stanislaw Witkiewicz, "On a New Type of Play" (pp. 182-187)

While sifting through your chosen critical work, be aware of your own entry point(s) into theatrical practice (acting, directing, costume design, etc.), as it will certainly inform your response to the theorist's words. Compose a fully-engaged response to the theorist, written in the first person, active voice, addressing his major points in any order you deem valuable. Be sure to consider both the THEORETICAL and PRACTICAL implications on the theatre as both you and the theorist see things. If you agree with the balance of the theorist's argument, then also consider how the ideas might be implemented in the American theatre of 2013 and beyond. If you disagree with the balance of the theorist's argument, then offer your own vision (insofar as the areas brought up by the chosen theorist), as concisely and cogently as possible.

Length should in the 3 to 5 pp. range (double-spaced, 10 to 12 font pitch), so get to the point as quickly as possible. In other words, a rambling, tangent-ridden manifesto is not a good thing. Let the author you've chosen be your guide for sticking to task and you'll be fine.

EVALUATION CRITERIA: Evidence of clear understanding of theorist's central points, clear and cogent argumentation. See attached sheet for breakdown. Graded out of 100 points.

It goes without saying at this point in your academic career (or, rather, it certainly should!) that the final document should be mechanically and stylistically flawless—meaning check the grammar and spelling!—and that all quotations of your theorist should be properly documented as per an accepted format: MLA, Chicago, etc. (This is covered in the fourth criterion for evaluation on said attached grading sheet.)

The first draft must be turned in to me no later than February 4; I will get drafts back as quickly as possible with an "advisory" grade (i.e. what you'd get if the first draft were a final draft), then you will prepare a final draft, which will be due March 6.

Critical Earthquake Response of Elastic-Plastic Structures Under Near-Fault or Long-Duration Ground Motions: Closed-Form Approach via Impulse Input Izuru Takewaki, 2015-12-22 The specialty section Earthquake Engineering is one branch of Frontiers in Built Environment and welcomes critical and in depth

submissions on earthquake ground motions and their effects on buildings and infrastructures Manuscripts should yield new insights and ultimately contribute to a safer and more reliable design of building structures and infrastructures The scope includes the characterization of earthquake ground motions e g near fault far fault short period long period their underlying properties their intrinsic relationship with structural responses and the true behaviors of building structures and infrastructures under risky and uncertain ground motions More specific topics include recorded ground motions generated ground motions response spectra stochastic modeling of ground motion critical excitation geotechnical aspects soil mechanics soil liquefaction soil structure interactions pile foundations earthquake input energy structural control passive control active control base isolation steel structures reinforced concrete structures wood structures building retrofit structural optimization uncertainty analysis robustness analysis and redundancy analysis This eBook includes four original research papers in addition to the Specialty Grand Challenge article on the critical earthquake response of elastic plastic structures under near fault or long duration ground motions which were published in the specialty section Earthquake Engineering In the early stage of dynamic nonlinear response analysis of structures around 1960s a simple hysteretic structural model and a simple sinusoidal earthquake ground motion input were dealt with together with random inputs The steady state response was tackled by an equivalent linearization method developed by Caughey Iwan and others In fact the resonance plays a key role in the earthquake resistant design and it has a strong effect even in case of near fault ground motions In order to draw the steady state response curve and investigate the resonant property two kinds of repetition have to be introduced One is a cycle for one forced input frequency of the initial guess of the steady state response amplitude the construction of the equivalent linear model the analysis of the steady state response amplitude using the equivalent linear model and the update of the equivalent linear model based on the computed steady state response amplitude The other is the sweeping over a range of forced input frequencies This process is quite tedious Four original research papers included in this eBook propose a new approach to overcome this difficulty Kojima and Takewaki demonstrated that the elastic plastic response as continuation of free vibrations under impulse input can be derived in a closed form by a sophisticated energy approach without solving directly the equations of motion as differential equations While as pointed out above the approach based on the equivalent linearization method requires the repetition of application of the linearized equations the method by Kojima and Takewaki does not need any repetition The double impulse triple impulse and multiple impulses enable us to describe directly the critical timing of impulses resonant frequency which is not easy for the sinusoidal and other inputs without a repetitive procedure It is important to note that while most of the previous methods employ the equivalent linearization of the structural model with the input unchanged the method treated in this eBook transforms the input into a series of impulses with the structural model unchanged This characteristic guarantees high accuracy and reliability even in the large plastic deformation range The approach presented in this eBook is an epoch making accomplishment to open the door for simpler and deeper understanding of structural reliability of built environments in the elastic plastic range

Starting Points in Critical Language Pedagogy Graham V. Crookes, Arman Abednia, 2022-01-01 Critical language pedagogy also sometimes referred to as critical ELT where English is the primary language involved has a literature in which theoretical and specialized work has outstripped more practically oriented material. Nevertheless even practically oriented publications in this area tend to address the experienced well resourced teacher as opposed to those beginning in this area or those without much professional support. With a view to helping prepare second language teachers to begin to engage with critical language pedagogy the authors of this book start from areas of conventional L2 curriculum that teachers naturally use. Each chapter presents material pertinent to areas of language language teaching and course delivery starting from a fairly conventional perspective. It then attempts to explain how this conception can be extended drawing upon the ideas of critical language pedagogy and teachers experiences. The authors experience of working with teachers who work under different circumstances in teacher education courses and workshops form key elements of the book. Teachers voices are also given adequate space so as to provide a comprehensive picture and situated understanding of critical language pedagogy. Dialogical engagement with the initial perspectives of beginning critical language pedagogy teachers who do not necessarily have a fully worked out critical philosophy of teaching or those who wish to practice critical ELT is another feature of the book. Finally to strengthen the practical orientation of the book teaching strategies and extracts of materials and lesson plans are also provided.

The editor's introduction analyzes the various critical stances both positive and negative informed also by her own 1992 interview with Beattie which appears as the final selection. Newly commissioned essays supplement the reviews articles and earlier interviews to bring a wide range of contemporary theory to bear on the fiction. An extensive primary and secondary bibliography complete the work.
