Critical Situations in Multicultural Teams. Challenges for Multinational Companies Lucia Schellwies, 2014-10-29
Bachelor Thesis from the year 2014 in the subject Business economics Business Management Corporate Governance grade 2
3 EBC University Stuttgart course International Business Management language English abstract As a result of the increasing globalization the business world gets interconnected and more and more organizations are operating internationally Such multinational companies often rely on successful teamwork to reach goals and to compete on the fast paced global market Indeed teamwork plays a variety of important roles when employees with varying skill sets and ideas are working together in a team not only information and knowledge can be shared successful teamwork can also lead to faster results A group of employees clearly can achieve more than one individual alone Teams whose members come from different nations and backgrounds place special demands on operations diversity clearly adds complexity and a longer learning curve for establishing effective processes In the multicultural team obviously culture itself is one significant characteristic in addition the role of emotions in the team have gained increasing interest in the last years Nevertheless research in this field is scarce and through adding an additional variable culture the multicultural character is making research even more complicate Practitioners report that where people work together emotions are not far to seek While influencing our thinking and behavior the effects of emotions and the resulting behavior can either be positive or negative In multicultural teams an awareness of emotions seems to be especially important as cultural differences in emotion processing and diversity among members may cause negative emotion and lead to conflict and misunderstandings what may have serious consequences reducing performance The aim of this paper is to identify challenges for multinational teams focusing on emotions within the team and to propose emotional intelligence as an approach to multicultural team effectiveness The two research questions guiding this work are 1 What role do emotions play in the multicultural team 2 Is emotional intelligence connected with multicultural team effectiveness

Developing Global Business Leaders Torsten Kühlmann, Mark Mendenhall, Günter K. Stahl, 2000-10-30 The widening gap between the requirements of multinational organizations and the strategic and managerial abilities of their leaders many of whose core experiences predated the globalization of business has created the need for this book Editors Mark E Mendenhall Torsten M K hlmann and G nter K Stahl have organized the results of their research and that of their colleagues in the fields of leadership development international management and organizational psychology for the benefit of scholars and practitioners alike After surveying current practices to bring the reader up to speed on global leadership development as pursued by the United States Germany Japan and with regard to women in leadership positions the book s focus shifts to a discussion of effective organizational processes In the third and final section contributors analyze the research that has been done on extending human resource management functional practices such as selection instrumentation the use of assessment centers multinational work groups cross cultural training programs and repatriation policies to global leadership development The editors define and analyze global leadership and in their review of the research clarify exactly what we know and don't know about developing global leadership skills and what it might be profitable to learn Practitioners will benefit from the contributors' well-grounded insights into such issues as the key distinctions between global and domestic corporations which dimensions of competency transcend internal corporate leadership dimensions and how global leadership competencies should be developed
