

From Contemplation to Precise Thinking & Empiricism

Aristotle (384-322 B.C.)

- first student of Plato -> then colleague -> then he set himself apart by founding his own school:

o Peripatetic School

Peripatetic School

- activity instead of receptivity o Peripatetic = walking around with him philosophizing was done while walking -> shows the active, open attitude towards the environment

- Observation instead of contemplation o walking meditation instead of sitting meditation active habitus: one wants to observe the outside world in detail

- realism instead of idealism o Empirical position: he did nature research his descriptions of biology and physiology were considered valid for a long time o Orientation towards (external) experience

Observation

Aristotle Logic

- Book: about the soul

o soul and body belong together o -> with Plato it was different

- Work: Organon

o method book

o transmission of the foundations of natural sciences, which are still important today especially forms of logical reasoning

- Systematic development of reasoning/ thinking o not every thinking is scientific thinking it needs precise thinking

- syllogisms

o = conclusions

o system of formal logic o often such conclusions contain quantifiers some, all, none

Deductive reasoning

- Premise 1: All humans are mortal o All A are B

- Premise 2: He is a human

o He is an A

Conclusion:

o He is mortal

o He is B

Conditional inferences (if-then):

- If it rains, the road is wet o If A, then B
