Generalized Linear Models (GLMs) are a family of statistical models that can be used to model a wide range of data types, including count data. GLMs are a generalization of linear models, which assume that the response variable is continuous and normally distributed. In the case of count data, the response variable is discrete and non-negative, and the distribution is typically assumed to be Poisson or negative binomial. GLMs allow for the inclusion of covariates and the estimation of the effect of these covariates on the response variable. The GLM framework provides a flexible and powerful tool for analyzing count data, and it is widely used in many fields, including biology, economics, and social sciences.
