Module 1: Properties and Structure of Matter

Properties of Matter

Particle Theory of Matter

All matter is made of tiny particles with empty spaces between them. Different substances are made of different types of particles. As the temperature increase particles move faster. Particles attract each other.

Pure Substances

Element: Consists of one type of atom that cannot be broken down to anything simpler.

Can exist as atoms or molecules eg. oxygen

Compound: Consists of two or more types of atoms that are chemically bonded together in a fixed ratio. Can be chemically broken down into simpler compounds or individual elements. Eg.  $H_2O$  (water)

Impure Substances (mixtures)

Consist of two or more different elements or compounds physically mixed. Can be physically separated into its components.

Homogeneous Mixture: Are evenly mixed throughout the mixture. This means the same properties and composition of the mixture remains the same throughout it. Eg. NaCl (table salt)

Heterogeneous Mixture: Are NOT evenly mixed, the properties and composition are differing throughout. Eg. A mixture of water & oil.

Calculating Percentage Composition

Gravimetric analysis is used to calculate the percentage composition (what % of each element is present) of a mixture by measuring a change in mass.

$$\% \text{ weight} = \frac{\text{Mass of component in sample (g)}}{\text{Total mass of sample (g)}} \times 100$$

Separation Methods

| Separation Method           | Description  |
|-----------------------------|--|
| Sieving                     | Using solids of different particle sizes. Sieve retains larger particles   |
| Sedimentation & Decantation | Based on density of particles. Large particles separate and 'settle' under the effect of gravity.   |
| Filtration                  | Based on particle size, mixture is poured through filter paper leaving insoluble residue as the filtrate passes through.                       |
| Evaporation (boiling)       | Liquids containing different boiling points. Liquid evaporates leaving, dissolved solution.  |
