ROAD TEST COMPARISONS

AT-A-GLANCE: Relatively small capacity road is surprisingly smooth. Available with either Bang-Wanner model 25 automatic transmission or 4-speed all-synchromesh manual gearbox. Quite good performance and better than average fuel consumption for its class. Fairly low suspension acceptable on normal surfaces. Very good all-disc braking system. Power assisted steering is an extra-cost option, as is an electrically heated rear window. Able to deal with wettest slush, heating and ventilation system falls short of modern standards.

Daimler
V8-250
(2,548 c.c.)

AT-A-GLANCE: Top car from Ford of Britain has V6 engine and automatic transmission. Manual transmission with overdrive at reduced cost. Power steering, sun roof and adjustable rear head seats are amongst the standard features. Fairly good performance, but not particularly economical, especially in town. Quiet at medium speeds but engine and wind noise objectionably high when driving fast. Straight line stability good, but handling vague. All-independent suspension gives good ride on most surfaces but cannot effectively cope with really bad ones. Brakes light during normal use, but very heavy during emergency use. Ample space for five.

Ford
Executive
(2,994 c.c.)

AT-A-GLANCE: Basically a Rover 3000 fitted with 3,528 c.c. aluminium road. Available only with Bang-Wanner Type 25 automatic transmission. Use of a large, big engine results in refined performance with reasonable economy. Automatic transmission smooth, but low upshift points. Very good handling despite considerable body roll. Superb brakes. Low speed steering effort rather high, but no major assistance option. Extremely comfortable individual seats and a highly efficient through-flow heating and ventilation system. Careful attention to safety.

Rover 3500
(3,528 c.c.)

AT-A-GLANCE: Most luxurious Vauxhall yet built. Power glide two-speed automatic transmission, power steering, electrically heated backlights, reclining seats, power windows and leather upholstery are amongst the standard features. A manual four-speed gearbox can be specified at reduced cost. Automatic transmission exceptionally smooth in operation, but additional work involved in the torque converter by having only two speeds has a detrimental effect on performance and economy. Very quiet and has quite good roadholding. Rather low geared steering is light, but retains adequate feel. Luxurious seven ride, but dislikes really rough surfaces. Very good brakes.
