

100% CDO

The CDO is a new type of security that is designed to provide investors with a return that is based on the performance of a portfolio of assets.

What is a CDO?

A CDO is a security that is created by pooling together a number of assets, such as mortgages, and then selling them to investors. The assets are typically divided into three categories: the most secure, the most risky, and the most speculative. The most secure assets are typically sold first, followed by the most risky, and then the most speculative. This process is known as "waterfalls" and is designed to provide investors with a return that is based on the performance of the assets.

How does a CDO work?

The CDO is typically created by a company that has a large portfolio of assets. The company will then sell the assets to investors, typically in three tranches. The first tranche is the most secure, the second is the most risky, and the third is the most speculative. The company will then receive a fee for creating the CDO.
