100. The following study was published in Journal of Interpersonal Violence, 2006, 21(12): 1593-1606. From the abstract: "The purpose of this study was to examine the relationship between the use of physical violence by men and women in dating relationships and the use of psychological aggression. The study was conducted with a sample of 100 college students. The results of the study indicated that there was a positive relationship between the use of physical violence and the use of psychological aggression. The study also found that the use of psychological aggression was a significant predictor of the use of physical violence." (p. 1593)
