This synthesis will be of interest to traffic engineers planners and others interested in making sure that motorists needs for directional information on freeways are being met Information is provided on policies and procedures used by states in evaluating freeway guide signs and replacing those that are outdated or deteriorated Many signs on freeways and other controlled access highways have exceeded their service life and are no longer serving motorists needs This report of the Transportation Research Board describes the policies procedures and criteria used by states for freeway sign evaluation and replacement programs

Customer-based Quality in Transportation Kathleen E. Stein, 1995 Practice of Rumble Strips and Rumble Stripes Omar Smadi, Neal R. Hawkins, 2016 This synthesis documents current practices used by states installing rumble strips and explores variations in practice in terms of design criteria and locations for installation maintenance perceived benefits communication of benefits and important issues Information was acquired through a literature review survey on current practice and case examples The survey also included questions specific to the state of practice for rumble stripes which is the term used when the pavement marking lines are painted on the rumble strip in an effort to increase visibility during inclement weather conditions The findings indicate that two thirds of the state agencies rely on traditional methods to address the noise issue skipping rumbles in residential areas adjusting their depth or not installing rumbles at all The overwhelming majority of responding states 83% have developed policies or guidance to modify their rumble design practices to be sensitive to cyclists Fewer than half the respondents have developed policies guidance to address pavement deterioration several agencies indicated that pavement condition is a factor on whether to install a rumble or not The survey also showed that very few state DOTs have created public campaigns to explain that the use of rumbles improves safety so that complaints regarding noise bicycle issues and other are minimized The Pennsylvania State Health Plan, 1983 AAMVA Bulletin, 1989 Synthesis of Highway Practice National Cooperative Highway Research Program, 1989 Information Legislative Service, 1989 Highway Research Abstracts, 1992 Congressional Record United States.
