UNIT-I

INTRODUCTION AND CHAIN SURVEYING

DEFINITION:

Surveying is the art of determining the relative positions of points on, above or beneath the surface of the earth by means of direct or indirect measurements of distance, direction & elevation.

Plane Survey:

Surveying which the mean surface of earth regarded as plain surface and not curve it really is known as plain surveying.

A following Assumption are made;

- (i) A level line is considered a strait line thus the plumb line at a point is parallel plumb line at any after point.
- (ii) The angles between two such lines that intersect is a plain angle and not a sphere angle.
- (iii) The meridian through any two points parallel.
- (iv) When we deal with only a small portion earths surface the above assumptions can justify.
- (v) The error induced for a length of an 18.5 kms it's only 0.0152 ms grater than sub dented chord 1.52 cm.

Geodetic survey :

Survey is which the shape (curvature) of the earth surface is taken in the account a higher degree of precision is exercised in linear and angular measurement is tanned as Geodetic Survey. A line connecting two points is regarded as an arc. Such surveys extend over large areas.

PRINCIPLES OF SURVEYING

- Location of a point by measurement from 2 points of reference
- Working from whole to part.

Location of a point by measurement from 2 points of reference

There should be 2 points of reference say P & Q P,Q are the ground reference points and permanent points. Point R can be located by any one of the following direct methods:

- Distance PR and QR can be measured and point R can be plotted by swinging the Two arcs of the same scale to which PQ has been plotted. The principle is very much used in chain surveying.
- Perpendicular RS can be dropped on the reference line PQ and the lengths PS and SR are measured. The point R can be plotted using this set square. This principle is used for defining details.
- The distance QR & the angle PQR can be measured and point R is plotted either by means of protractor or trigonometrically. The principle is used in traversing.
