

Centaur With Grape Hoe

standard heavy disc harrow makes a splendid vineyard outfit.

For working between the vines in the row there is no better tool made than the John Deere Grape Hoe and we have provided a special hitch by means of which the Grape Hoe can be attached to the cultivator and can be operated successfully in connection with it.

The Centaur has ample power to pull the cultivator and the grape Hoe at the same time and with these two implements operating together the vineyard can be kept in the very best condition.

The advantage in using the Grape Hoe in connection with the Centaur over using the Grape Hoe with a horse is that the speed of the Centaur can be accurately controlled and the grape hoe drawn at a uniform speed enabling the operator to work much closer to the vines in the row than is possible with any other power.

The regular horse drawn grape hoe can be used by simply getting the link and clamp that connects the hoe to the cultivator bar, or we can supply the grape hoe equipped ready to be attached to the Centaur as these implements are carried in stock by us.

"DID ALL THAT WAS REQUIRED"

January 26th, 1922

The Central Tractor Company,
Greenwich, Ohio.

Gentlemen:
I note that you have perfected your tractor to include a reverse gear, and hasten to congratulate you on this improvement. We used your tractor on my farm last season. I had no faith in its developing sufficient power to do the work expected of it, but was, however, agreeably surprised in finding that it had an abundance, and to spare. And now, your having added the reverse feature, will greatly increase its value on the ordinary farm. It did all that was required in the field, and we found it especially valuable and convenient as a portable engine. It could be used on the pump, at the house, at the barn and in the pasture; it was easily transported and adjusted to run the cream separator, the washing machine, and the feed grinder, as well as the grindstone, lathe and forge in the small machine shop which every farm should have.

Very truly yours,
(Signed) Harris E. Thomas.

"WORKS IN ALL KINDS OF SOIL"

New London, Ohio
January 31th, 1922

The Central Tractor Co.,
Greenwich, Ohio.

Gentlemen:
I have been selling Centaur Tractors in Northern Ohio for about two years and in that time have been in competition with all of the other small tractors on the market, but I have never lost a sale where the Centaur was demonstrated in competition with other tractors as the work it does and the ease with which it handles together with its many other advantages over competitive tractors, quickly convinces any prospective buyer.
I have used the Centaur in all kinds of soil conditions from heavy clay soil to sand and much and it is the only tractor that I know of that will do satisfactory work under varying conditions. I have had practically no service on the Tractors sold and have replaced only two or three defective parts since I have been handling the Tractor.

Yours very truly,
(Signed) C. L. Chamberlain.
