Wildlife Ecology and Management in Mexico Raul Valdez, José Alfonso Ortega-Santos, 2019-01-23 Mexico is the fourteenth largest country in the world and ranks fifth in biodiversity Located in the transition zone between the temperate and tropical regions of North and South America Mexico is an important migratory corridor for wildlife and also provides wintering habitat for several species of bats monarch butterflies and temperate North American nesting birds Mexico faces several challenges to wildlife management and conservation efforts While there is increased public education and acknowledgment of the valuable benefits wildlife provides there is still much work to do to incentivize conservation efforts Fortunately there is growing recognition that Mexico's wildlife resources can be a critical component in the rural economic development of the country Bringing together an international team of wildlife experts across North America Wildlife Ecology and Management in Mexico provides information on the status distribution ecological relationships and habitat requirements and management of the most important game birds and mammals in Mexico It also reviews current threats and challenges facing wildlife conservation as well as strategies for resolving these issues This reference is a valuable tool for wildlife biologists wildlife management professionals and anyone interested in conserving Mexico's wealth of natural resources By laying out the challenges to conservation research editors Raul Valdez and J Alfonso Ortega S hope to encourage interdisciplinary communication and collaboration across borders

Ecosystem Dynamics of the Boreal Forest : The Kluane Project Vancouver Charles J. Krebs Professor of Zoology University of British Columbia, Edmonton Stan Boutin Professor of Zoology University of Alberta, Rudy Boonstra Professor of Physiology and Zoology University of Toronto, 2001-03-31 The boreal forest is one of the world's great ecosystems stretching across North America and Eurasia in an unbroken band and containing about 25% of the world's closed canopy forests The Kluane Boreal Forest Ecosystem Project was a 10 year study by nine of Canada's leading ecologists to unravel the impact of the snowshoe hare cycle on the plants and the other vertebrate species in the boreal forest In much of the boreal forest the snowshoe hare acts as a keystone herbivore fluctuating in 9-10 year cycles and dragging along secondary cycles in predators such as lynx and great horned owls By manipulating the ecosystem on a large scale from the bottom via fertilizer additions and from the top by predator exclosures they have traced the plant herbivore relationships and the predator prey relationships in this ecosystem to try to answer the question of what drives small mammal population cycles This study is unique in being large scale and experimental on a relatively simple ecosystem with the overall goal of defining what determines community structure in the boreal forest Ecosystem Dynamics of the Boreal Forest The Kluane Project summarizes these findings weaving new discoveries of the role of herbivores turned predators compensatory plant growth and predators eating predators with an ecological story rich in details and clear in its findings of a community where predation plays a key role in determining the fate of individuals and populations The study of the Kluane boreal forest raises key questions about the scale of conservation required for boreal forest communities and the many mammals and birds that live there

Living with Coyotes Stuart R. Ellins, 2010-01-01 The coyote may well be North America's most adaptable large predator While humans have depleted or eliminated most other native predators the coyote has defied all attempts to exterminate it simultaneously expanding its range from coast to coast and from wilderness to urban areas As a result coyotes are becoming the focus of increasing controversy and emotion for people across the continent from livestock growers who would like to eradicate coyotes to conservationists who would protect them at any cost In this thoughtful well argued and timely book Stuart Ellins makes the case that lethal methods of coyote management do not work and that people need to adopt a more humane way of coexisting with coyotes Interweaving scientific data about coyote behavior and natural history with decades of field experience he shows how endlessly adaptive coyotes are and how attempts to kill them off have only strengthened the species through natural selection He then explains the process of taste aversion conditioning which he has successfully employed to stop coyotes from killing domestic livestock and pets Writing frankly as an advocate of this effective and humane method of controlling coyotes he asks Why are we mired in the use of archaic inefficient unsophisticated and barbaric methods of wildlife management in this age of reason and high technology This question must be addressed while there is still a wildlife to manage
