& Advertising) Bill Great Britain: Department for Culture, Media and Sport, 2012-12-03 This year's accountability hearings focused on three areas of particular interest the arrangements for revalidation of doctors which are to commence on 3 December 2012 and associated matters such as patient involvement and examination of the language competence of doctors the professional leadership activity undertaken by the GMC in the last year and the regulation activity undertaken by the GMC including the establishment of the Medical Practitioner Tribunal Service The Council is performing effectively in its two roles of defining and applying standards for the medical profession and providing a focus of professional leadership The outcome of the Law Commission's consultation on professional regulation in the health and care sector which proposed a formal role for the Health Committee in the accountability structures is still awaited Specific concerns included that whilst there has been some progress on the amendment of domestic legislation which restricts the language testing of doctors this is no substitute for the revision of the European legislation which presently prohibits language testing of doctors on a national basis There have also been continued upward trends in complaints against doctors received by the GMC and the Committee expects to examine in 2013 the outcomes of further research the GMC has commissioned into these trends The Committee feels that the present 15 month target for the GMC to complete 90% of its fitness to practise cases should be lowered to 12 months The Committee also welcomes proposed legislation to enable the GMC's investigatory arm to appeal against decisions made by the MPTS where the outcome of a hearing is disputed
