How is it Made? Fuel

Blake Education, Classroom Video, 2009 – 5 minutes

When you go to the petrol station and Mum or Dad fills up the car, do you ever wonder where the fuel actually comes from?

It's amazing to see that many products we use every day are made from the same material we put in our cars. From shoes to pens and even drink bottles, they are all made from oil.

This video gives us a fascinating look into how oil was created in the first place, and the process it goes through before it is ready to be used as fuel or to make other products. The two child narrators also look at some of the environmental problems caused by our use of fuel, such as oil spills and air pollution. Unfortunately, oil is a non-renewable resource, which means one day it will run out.

on ways to solve this problem. Already we can buy hybrid cars which use a lot less fuel than normal cars. I wonder what else the future will hold?

Making fuel is a very complicated process, yet the way the narrators explain the specific language and use moving diagrams to highlight key points makes it simple to follow. The experiments shown feature everyday items which anyone can use. These scenes have close-up shots so the audience can clearly see what is going on. At other times, when dealing with busy scenes, the scenes are short. The topic was examined and stuck to the facts.

Students from middle primary and even some in upper primary, would benefit from this knowledge about how one of our most important resources is developed. It could even lead them into developing new ideas about what their own futures might look like. A great classroom resource rated four out of five.

SD WORK SHEET

Character Summaries

The main section (body) of a review includes details about the main characters. For example:

- their names
- how are they related to each other (friends, relatives, enemies)
- what happens to them
- a description of them.

1. Circle the words used by the author to evaluate or give an opinion about the character AL.

AL, short for (Alvin), is not your ordinary everyday alien, despite his small green appearance. In, or she, is in fact quite unusual. Most aliens we see in movies are far more advanced than we are and have an abundance of knowledge. But not AL, who is really silly. You can't help but to think from the garden house, AL shows us the funny side of life in the suburbs.

2. Think of a character in a media text you have viewed. Sketch the character in the box and write a brief summary.

Blake's Writer's Guide for Primary Students Merryn Whitfield, 2009 This colourful book is a comprehensive reference book for students from middle primary upwards and for everyone who wants to communicate effectively through writing. Blake's Writer's Guide is split into two parts. Part 1 The Writing Process Provides step by step instructions on the five stages of the writing process: pre-writing, drafting, revising, editing, proofreading, publishing. The traits of good writing and the tools of an author are also examined in detail. Part 2 Text Types Explains what text types and genres are and features several samples of imaginative, informative and argumentative texts. Each text sample is shown with annotations that highlight their specific language and structure features. The text types examined in the guide are: Imaginative narrative texts, science fiction, fairytales, poetry, dramatic plays, anecdotes. Argumentative texts: expositions, arguments, letters to the editor, advertisements, reviews, discussions. Informative texts: factual recounts, reports, explanations, news articles, procedures, biographies, descriptions.

The Intellectual World of Late Antique Christianity Lewis Ayres, Michael W. Champion, Matthew R. Crawford, 2023-10-26 The Intellectual World of Late Antique Christianity explores new perspectives on early Christian epistemology in relation to the changing discourses, institutions and material culture of late antiquity. Early Christian modes of knowing and ordering knowledge involved complex processes of appropriation, reproduction and reconfiguration of Jewish and classical epistemologies. This helped Christians develop cultures of interpretation and argument as textually oriented religious communities within the Roman Empire and beyond. It laid an intellectual foundation that would be built upon and modified in a variety of later contexts. Encompassing Greek, Latin and Syriac Christianity and an historical arc that stretches from the New Testament to Bede, this volume traces how diverse theological commitments resulted in distinctive Christian accounts of knowing. It foregrounds the myriad ways in which early Christian epistemology was embedded in earlier intellectual traditions and forms of life and how they established norms for communal life and powerful ways of acting in the world.

Persuasion in Specialised Discourses Olga Dontcheva-Navratilova, Martin Adam, Renata Povolná, Radek Vogel, 2020-12-10 This book examines the concept of persuasion in written texts for specialist audiences in the English and Czech languages. By exploring a corpus of academic research articles, corporate reports, religious sermons and user manuals, the authors aim to reveal similarities and differences in rhetorical strategies across cultures and genres. They draw on Biber and Conrad's 2009 model for contextualising interaction in specialised discourses, Bell's 1997 framework for the analysis of participants' roles, Swales' 1990 genre analysis approach for considering genre constraints and Hyland's 2005 metadiscourse model for investigating writer-reader interaction. The result is a book which will appeal to researchers and students in Discourse Studies, especially those with an interest in genre and rhetorical strategies.
