increasingly significant in today s critical avionics systems To achieve safe reliable software government regulatory agencies such as the Federal Aviation Administration FAA and the Department of Defense mandate the use of certain software development methods However little scientific evidence exists to show a correlation between software development methods and product quality Given this lack of evidence a series of experiments has been conducted to understand why and how software fails The Guidance and Control Software GCS project is the latest in this series The GCS project is a case study of the Requirements and Technical Concepts for Aviation RTCA DO 178B guidelines Software Considerations in Airborne Systems and Equipment Certification All civil transport airframe and equipment vendors are expected to comply with these guidelines in building systems to be certified by the FAA for use in commercial aircraft For the case study two implementations of a guidance and control application were developed to comply with the DO 178B guidelines for Level A critical software The development included the requirements design coding verification configuration management and quality assurance processes This paper discusses the details of the GCS project and presents the results of the case study
