Introduction

There are basically two types of stationary exercise bikes that people looking for good cardiovascular workouts often use.

One is the upright type exercise bike which resembles a regular road-type bike in the sense that it is oriented vertically and has similar handle bars protruding up front.

The other type is the recumbent stationary bike where the rider is seated with his back fully supported and legs extended up front onto the pedals.

These two types of exercise bikes offer different levels of health benefits to users, but many users find recumbent exercise bikes much more convenient and comfortable to use than the upright version, although experts find the workout you can get from such bikes less intense.

A good manual recumbent bike unit is the Body Solid Endurance B2R which can give you an effective low-intensity workout that will give great benefits for your cardiovascular health and fitness.

The Body Solid Endurance B2R Manual Recumbent Bike is a stationary exercise bike that is said to be durable enough to last you a lifetime, giving you the cardiovascular workout routine you need to keep in shape.
