ACTIVITY WORKBOOK

SHARON ANTHONY, KEVIN L. BRAUN, HEATHER MERNITZ

What is the difference between a trans-fat and an omega-3 fatty acid?
How is acid rain formed?
How much energy comes from my food?

ChemConnections modules, developed with support from the National Science Foundation, provide a guided, discovery-based approach to promote students' deep understanding of a broad range of chemistry concepts and problem-solving techniques. Based on those modules, this workbook includes fifty-nine classroom activities set in the context of societal and environmental issues. Each research-based, classroom-tested activity is designed to take between thirty and ninety minutes and may be used to enrich lecture, recitation, or lab.

Activities have been written as independent worksheets so that instructors can incorporate them without having to make significant changes to their courses. Each worksheet begins with a central question and basic information to set the environmental or societal context. Students are then asked to work through a series of questions that help them gain a deeper understanding of the chemical concepts by putting those concepts into practice in a real-world setting.
