The green indicates the most selected state by residents from each state.

Queensland was reported as the most desirable destination for respondents from all states, with the exception of Western Australia and Northern Territory residents, who both identified WA as being the most aspirational state to travel to in Australia.

This chart does not take into account the relative populations of each state, hence it should be regarded as indicative of perception from states, rather than marketing opportunity. To illustrate this, the 20% of Tasmanians who want to travel to WA is a potential market of 103,000, while the 20% of Victorians who want to travel to WA is a potential market of 1.27 million.
