

Hyundai Santa Fe

The Santa Fe is a pleasant SUV. A freshening brought a 2.4-liter four-cylinder engine and the V6 grew to 3.5-liters. It also got a six-speed automatic, but lost the third-row seat in the process. The Santa Fe has reasonably quick steering response, making it fairly agile. We found the ride compliant and well controlled, but the annoying suspension noise remains. The nicely finished cabin is roomy and quiet with comfortable seats, but head room is a bit tight for tall drivers. Curtain air bags are standard. Reliability of the four-cylinder version has been average but the V6 version is below average.

Hyundai Sonata

The midsize Sonata ranks among the best family sedans, with a firm, yet comfortable ride and fairly nimble handling. The standard powertrain is a 200-hp four-cylinder engine mated to a smooth, responsive six-speed automatic. We got an impressive 27 mpg overall. Top-level models get a quicker and stronger 274-hp, four-cylinder turbo that returns 25 mpg overall. However, road noise is evident, particularly in the turbo. The interior is nicely finished. Rear-seat room and visibility are decent despite the swoopy styling, but rear-seat access is compromised. The hybrid version is unfinished. Reliability of the non-hybrid versions has been average.
