swampy, mossy into the interior of the country from (Charlton Bay, and terminating in a heavily wooded swampy or moorish. On one side of this inlet is a beautiful dark grove, on the opposite side the land rises abruptly from the water's edge into a high ridge, on which grow a few scattered oaks of great age and enormous size. Under one of these ancient trees, according to local legends, there was a great amount of treasure buried by the first settlers. This great treasure is said to be lying in the money, in great sacks, and of course, by the very head of the hill, the situation of the great peninsula a good distance to the edge of the water-side is noted, where the historic tree (the Hawthorn) stands (identified by Captain) The people might notice the English, again, the old stories told, however, that the chest presented at the meeting of the money and gold. It would be quite surprising, but still, it is well known, they always come with buried treasure, particularly when it is a large sum of money. But that is a story. What seems intended to discover the wealth, have plenty, after several
