

Declaration of Independence

IN CONGRESS JULY 4th. 1776.

The unanimous Declaration of the thirteen united States of America

When in the course of these events we found it necessary to declare the political bond which has connected them with another, under whose authority we were at first united, and which we now find to be dissolved, we have deemed it our duty to declare our independence.

We hold these truths to be self-evident, that all men are created equal, that they are endowed by their Creator with certain unalienable Rights, that among these are Life, Liberty and the pursuit of Happiness.

That to secure these rights, Governments are instituted among Men, deriving their just powers from the consent of the governed, that whenever any Form of Government becomes destructive of these ends, it is the Right of the People to alter or to abolish it, and to institute new Government, laying its foundation on such principles and organizing its powers in such form, as to them shall seem most likely to effect their Safety and Happiness. Prudence, indeed, dictates that Governments of long standing should not be changed for light and transient causes; and accordingly we have suffered our former Governments to exist till they have become destructive of the ends for which they were instituted. But when a long train of abuses and usurpations, pursuing invariably the same Object, evinces a design to reduce them to absolute Tyranny, it is their duty to throw off such Government, and to provide new Guards for their future security. Such has been the patient sufferance of these Colonies, and such has been the
