Children of the Dark Alan Gallop, 2003 This is a true story covering territory rarely featured in history books a dark time when women and children toiled underground in Victorian coal mines Using extensive research the book brings back to life the early Victorian mining community of Silkstone South Yorkshire Recreating the sad date of July 4 1838 when a freak rain and hail storm caused a narrow and shallow stream to burst its banks and flood the main passageway shaft leading to the Huskar Pit resulting in the death of 26 children aged between seven and 15 years News of the disaster finds its way into The Times and is read by Lord Ashley later the Earl of Shaftesbury and an official enquiry is launched Lord Ashley and the Commissioner of the Royal Commission on mines and collieries Jelinger C Symons Esq both visit and interview mine owners and workers and descend into the mines to understand what conditions are really like particularly for women and children On August 10 1842 over four years after the Huskar Pit disaster had brought the subject of women and children working in Yorkshire's coal mines to public attention a bill is passed to change the country's labour laws regarding their employmen

The Entrepreneurial Society of the Rhondda Valleys, 1840-1920 Richard Griffiths, 2010 This is the first book to examine in a systematic way the entrepreneurial society of the Welsh valleys until now almost everything written about the society created by the Welsh coal industry has focused on the workers and the unions leaving a significant absence in any attempt at achieving a rounded picture of life in the south Wales valleys during the coal boom This book looks at the various sources of wealth in the area coalowning railway building possession of land in crucial areas contracting building property development shopkeeping and at the varied origins of the first generation entrepreneurs before going on to examine closely the networks of power and influence that developed between the second generation entrepreneurs in the close and claustrophobic middle class society of the Porth Pontypridd area The book's method is to take one extended family central to that society along with its vast network of friends and collaborators and to examine in great detail using original sources the often hair raising business methods of these people as well as their conflicts of interest at times of industrial unrest At the same time the changes in valleys life are mirrored in the history of this group the original rags to riches stories of so many of the first generation the self sufficient confidence of so many of the second generation for whom the coal boom seemed destined to last for ever and the gradual move thereafter from the industrialised valleys to the coastal towns of south wales ahead of the coal industry s decline Book Jacket The New Larned History for Ready Reference, Reading and Research Josephus Nelson Larned,1923 Canada: an Encyclopædia of the Country: Rebellion of 1837 and constitutional development.
