

CNN EXAM

Question 1

Mrs. Kathy Dye, 45 years old, has end-stage renal disease secondary to glomerulonephritis. She began dialysis emergently and has a cuffed, tunneled, central venous catheter.

---

The preferred site for a central venous catheter for dialysis access is the -

- right external jugular.
- left external jugular.
- left internal jugular.

Correct Answer:

The preferred site is the right internal jugular vein because this site offers a more direct route to the right atrium than the left-sided great veins. Catheter insertion and maintenance in the right internal jugular vein are associated with a lower risk for complications compared to other potential catheter insertion sites.
