Chapter 2 The Public Accounting Profession

Chapter opener: Leveraging the Power of Professional Judgment

1. Virtually any industry could be listed as a specialization, even banking, as there are some small credit unions that would fall under banking. Key is that the student explains how the specialization is acquired (e.g. by reading the standards, having worked in the industry, or practice with a group of clients).
2. Read the standards, attend training, review each other's work, consult with peers, and likely others.
3. Attend seminars offered by the industry, read the legislation, work with these organizations on an ongoing basis to find out and stay current with what is happening for them.

Audit Challenge

2-1 National and Regional CGA Firms

1. They would be looking for members that are current in their field, have good quality control practices, have a good reputation in their community, and are competent. The prospective members would likely also need to be qualified PAs and professional accountants.
2. They could ask about the nature of the quality control practices in place, as well as the results of peer review from the local professional accounting association. They could also engage in their own peer review, have members from one firm location assess the work of another location.

Concept Check Answers

C2-1 Large international or national firms have more specialist functions and a greater variety of support resources. They also have the resources and skills to audit publicly listed organizations from many different industries. Smaller, local firms may have only one or two partners who serve local business.

C2-2 Websites can be used to provide information to clients, including results of research that could attract potential new clients. The Internet can also be used to transfer information back
