Brantus,2007 Seminomas account for about 30 40% of all testicular tumours These are usually is found in men in their 30s and 40s The condition is usually localised to the testes although in about 25% of cases it has spread to lymph nodes Non seminomas account for 60% of all testicular tumours subcategories of these tumours are listed below Non seminoma tumours often contain more than one of the following cell types Testicular cancer is an abnormal rapid and invasive growth of cancerous malignant cells in the testicles Embryonal carcinoma about 20% of testicular cancers occurs in 20-30 year olds and is highly malignant. It grows rapidly and spreads to the lung and liver. Yolk sac tumour about 60% of all testicular cancers in young boys. Teratomata about 7% of testicular cancers in adult men and 40% in young boys.

Choriocarcinoma is rare. Stromal cell tumours are a kind of tumour that is made of Leydig cells (testosterone secreting cells), Sertoli cells (cells where sperm matures) and granulosa cells. These tumours account for only 3-4% of all testicular tumours. However, they do make up nearly 20% of all childhood testicular tumours. These tumours may secrete a hormone, estradiol, that can cause one of the symptoms of testicular cancer, gynecomastia (excessive development of breast tissue). This book presents leading edge research in the field.

What you need to know about testicular cancer, 1988. Testicular Cancer and Other Tumors of the Genitourinary Tract. M. Pavone-MacAluso, 2013-11-27. The proceedings of this volume represent a record of a meeting in the Ettore Majorana center in Erice, Sicily, from 16-24 July 1983. This was the fifth course of the International School of Urology and Nephrology, the fourth in a series of meetings devoted to different aspects of Urological Oncology. Speakers and delegates came from nearly every part of the world and contributed to a detailed analysis of the current state of knowledge of tumors of the testicle and to the development of knowledge of cancer of the bladder, prostate and kidney. Previous volumes resulting from this series of meetings have been well received and the Editors hope that the reader may find the record of this meeting equally attractive. We are indebted to the Department of Medical Illustration, St James's University Hospital, for their kindness in producing several of the illustrations in this book. The editors are very grateful to Dr Cavallo of Palermo for the major part which he has played in preparing the index. M. Pavone, MacAluso, P. H. Smith, M. A. Bagshaw. v. CONTENTS. I. Testis cancer: genes, environment, hormones. Alberto Ferlin, Carlo Foresta, 2015-10-29. Testicular cancer (TC) is the most common cancer in males aged 20-40 years, with a worldwide incidence of 7.5 per 100,000, but the rates vary considerably between countries and ethnic groups, and there is evidence also for an increasing incidence in last decades. About 95% of all TCs are represented by testicular germ cell tumors (TGCTs) which include seminoma and non-seminoma histological types. It is generally assumed that the development of TGCT is under endocrine control. In particular, unbalanced androgen/estrogen levels and/or activity are believed to represent the key events for TGCT development and progression. Furthermore, recent evidence has suggested genetic association of TGCT with variations in genes involved in the hypothalamic-pituitary-testicular axis and steroidogenic enzymes. This recent evidence expands the current knowledge on the role of genetic contribution in testicular cancer susceptibility and supports the hypothesis that variations in hormone metabolism genes might change the hormonal environment implicated in testicular carcinogenesis. Therefore, hormonal carcinogenesis is an important and controversial area of current research in TGCT and further attention is given to genetic factors influencing hormone related cancer risk The genetic component to TGCT is in general strong In fact although environmental factors clearly contribute to TGCT development and probably to its increasing incidence in some geographical areas the proportion of TGCT susceptibility accounted for by the genetic effects is estimated at 25% TGCT has high familial risks compared with most other cancer types that are generally no more than two fold brothers of individuals with TGCT have an 8 to 12 fold increased risk of disease and sons of affected individuals have a 4 to 6 fold increased risk Despite this strong familial relative risk early results from linkage studies identified a limited relationship with genetic factors suggesting that TGCT is a genetically complex trait However more recently four genome wide association studies GWAS from the UK and USA have reported association of TGCTs with six new loci KITLG SPRY4 BAK1 DMRT1 TERT and ATF7IP The strongest association for TGCT susceptibility was found for SNPs in KITLG ligand for the membrane bound receptor tyrosine kinase KIT gene with a greater than 2.5 fold increased risk of disease per major allele which is the highest reported for any cancer to date These studies are being now replicated by other researches and attention is given to the relationship between these genetic variations TGCT risk and frequently associated anomalies of the reproductive tract such as cryptorchidism and infertility Finally over the past few decades TCGT research has focused also on external environmental causes acting mainly as endocrine disruptors of androgen and oestrogen pathways even during the foetal development of the testis It is well known that the testicular dysgenesis syndrome TDS hypothesis proposed ten years ago suggests that disturbed testicular development in fetal life may result in one or more of four disorders postnatally named cryptorchidism hypospadias poor semen quality and TGCT These four disorders are therefore considered as one clinical entity and are linked together by epidemiological and pathophysiological relations The relative contribution of genetics and environment in TGCT development and the interactions between endocrine disruptors and variations in genes involved in hormonal carcinogenesis is therefore another interesting area of research

Testicular Cancer Heather Hasan, 2011-01-15 Describes testicular cancer including diagnosis and treatment who is at risk for the disease and the future of scientific research on the cancer Understanding Testicular Cancer CancerBACUP., 2002 Written for men who have been diagnosed with cancer of the testicles this booklet discusses the causes and symptoms tests used for diagnosis and the types of treatment surgery radiotherapy and chemotherapy It includes a discussion on how the treatment may affect a man's sex life and on storing sperm before treatment begins

Testicular Cancer Minati Bisoyi, 2019-07-06 Testicular cancer is an anomalous development of cells found in the balls or testicles The balls are the male regenerative organs gonads where sperm are delivered The two small testicular organs lie in a pocket of skin underneath and behind the penis called the scrotal sac or scrotum They are joined to the ejaculatory pipe in the lower pelvis by strings called spermatic ropes which contain the vas deferens the thin tube through which the sperm moves out of the testis Beside delivering and putting away sperm the gonads or testicles are the primary wellspring of male hormones for example testosterone which are fundamental for typical sex drive moxie for erections discharge and which drive advancement of male physical characteristics for example profound voice and body and facial hair Cancer more often than not happens in just a single gonad Under 5% of the time it happens in the two balls Normally if a second testicular cancer emerges the two tumors are found at various circumstances the second maybe years after the fact Male Illustration Testicular Cancer Cancer happens when typical cells change and start to develop and increase without ordinary controls This uncontrolled development brings about a mass of irregular cells called a tumor Some tumors develop rapidly others all the more gradually Tumors are on the grounds that they overpower encompassing sound tissue taking its space as well as the oxygen and supplements it needs to complete its ordinary capacities Not all tumors are cancer A tumor is considered cancer in the event that it is harmful This implies if the tumor isn't dealt with and ceased it will spread to different parts of the body Different tumors are named kind on the grounds that their cells don't spread to different organs In any case all tumors begin to cause indications when they get sufficiently extensive Malignant tumors can spread to neighbouring structures typically lymph hubs They attack these solid tissues hindering their capacity and in the long run decimate them Tumor cells in some cases enter the circulation system and spread to removed organs There they can develop as comparative however isolate tumors This procedure is called metastasis The most normal spots for testicular cancer to spread are the lymph hubs in the territory close to the kidneys situated in the back of the stomach region and alluded to as the retroperitoneum region and are called the retroperitoneal lymph hubs It likewise can spread to the lungs liver and once in a while to the mind Metastatic cancers emerging in the testicles are harder to cure than kind hearted tumors yet at the same time have high cure rates Testicular cancers can be included one or a few distinct sorts of tumor cells The sorts depend on the cell write from which the tumor emerges By far the most widely recognized compose is germ cell carcinoma These tumors emerge from the sperm framing cells inside the testicles Most of the data exhibited here concerns germ cell tumors There are two kinds of germ cells tumors seminomas and non seminomas Seminomas emerge from just a single kind of cell juvenile germ cells that have not yet separated or transformed into the particular sorts of tissues they will move toward becoming in the typical testis These constitute around 40% of every testicular cancer Non seminomatous germ cell tumors are made out of develop cells that have officially specific Subsequently these tumors frequently are blended that is they are comprised of in excess of one tumor write Ordinary parts incorporate choriocarcinoma embryonal carcinoma juvenile teratoma and yolk sac tumors These tumors have a tendency to be more quickly developing and to spread more forcefully than seminomas
