

CASE STUDY: DEPRESSION

Title:

To develop a case study of a person suffering from depression.

Introduction:

Depression (major depressive disorder) is a common and serious medical illness that negatively affects how you feel the way you think and how you act. Fortunately, it is also treatable. Depression causes feelings of sadness and/or a loss of interest in activities you once enjoyed. It can lead to a variety of emotional and physical problems and can decrease your ability to function at work and at home. A person with depression has profound feelings of sadness, worthlessness and guiltiness which usually are incapacitating. These depressive feelings often are so marked that they cause a distortion of the person's contact with reality. The predominant feature of a depression is a profound feeling of melancholy and despair. The majority of patients with severe depressions have suicidal thoughts sometime during their illness. Suicidal attempts are common.

Depression symptoms can vary from mild to severe and can include:

- o Feeling sad or having a depressed mood
- o Loss of interest or pleasure in activities once enjoyed
- o Changes in appetite — weight loss or gain unrelated to dieting
- o Trouble sleeping or sleeping too much
- o Loss of energy or increased fatigue
- o Increase in purposeless physical activity (e.g., inability to sit still, pacing, handwringing) or slowed movements or speech (these actions must be severe enough to be observable by others)
- o Feeling worthless or guilty
- o Difficulty thinking, concentrating or making decisions
- o Thoughts of death or suicide

Symptoms must last at least two weeks and must represent a change in your previous level of functioning for a diagnosis of depression.

Also, medical conditions (e.g., thyroid problems, a brain tumor or vitamin deficiency) can mimic symptoms of depression so it is important to rule out general medical causes.

Depression Is Different From Sadness or Grief/Bereavement

The death of a loved one, loss of a job or the ending of a relationship are difficult experiences for a person to endure. It is normal for feelings of sadness or grief to develop in response to such situations. Those experiencing loss often might describe themselves as being "depressed."

But being sad is not the same as having depression. The grieving process is natural and unique to each individual and shares some of the same features of depression. Both grief and depression may involve intense sadness and withdrawal from usual activities. Depression can affect anyone—even a person who appears to live in relatively ideal circumstances.
