Comparative Study on Internationalization of Higher Education in China and Japan Yanan Sun, 2017-01-27 This dissertation Comparative Study on Internationalization of Higher Education in China and Japan a Review of Historical Roots by Yanan Sun was obtained from The University of Hong Kong Pokfulam Hong Kong and is being sold pursuant to Creative Commons Attribution 3.0 Hong Kong License The content of this dissertation has not been altered in any way We have altered the formatting in order to facilitate the ease of printing and reading of the dissertation All rights not granted by the above license are retained by the author Abstract As a response to globalization internationalisation of higher education could be accomplished by the forms of a series of national policies and institutional strategies to strengthen the global competitiveness of universities The history of Japanese higher education spans approximately over 130 years experiencing both flourishing time and stagnant period Driven by the increasing pace of internationalisation and great pressure originated from global competition Japanese government has already taken concrete measures to get its higher education better merged into internationalization However higher education in Japan is now at a crossroads maintaining its sustainable and steady development As Japan's neighboring country China came much more slowly of breaking the ice for the internationalisation in dimension of higher education if compared with Japan As gradually playing an important role internationally China has invested massively into internationalisation of higher education as well However the direction of development in Chinese higher education seems to be blur or too early to tell The current status of higher education in China and Japan are both characterized by profoundly historical roots Better understanding on the historical internationalisation in both countries sheds light on the understanding of higher education in contemporary China and Japan and their developmental progress Therefore the present dissertation examines the originally authentic sense of internationalisation which could be traced back to the middle to late 19th century During the middle of nineteenth century China and Japan were both undergoing the threat from invasive West with countries independence and traditional culture in danger In response to expansion of the West Chinese and Japanese's reactions varied enormously in polity subversion economic construction attitudes towards foreign culture and educational reform The Meiji Restoration of 1868 in Japan rapidly foster its modernization by successfully using the barbarian to control the barbarian to achieve the equal standards with the West eventually which opened a brand new page for the beginning of Japanese modern history Unlike Japan Chinese failure in Self Strengthening Movement which was supposed to be the preparation of modernization in China stroke China back to the abyss of bureaucratic governance leading Chinese modernization and first step accepting western culture and technology almost half a century later than Japan In this sense historical roots of internationalisation in China and Japan would be taken into serious consideration in this dissertation because it shaped countries status quo and would probably insert a far reaching influence on the prospective development DOI 10 5353 th_b5210262 Subjects Education Higher China Education Higher Japan

A Bourdieusian Analysis of Chinese Transnational Higher Education Policy Enactment

Xiao Han,2025-05-30 This book provides an empirical examination of the meso level policy enactment of transnational higher education in the context of China China s national policies have not been mechanically implemented at the sub national level the strategic enactment is always accompanied by great creativity innovation and or even resistance From the prism of Bourdieu s relational sociology this study moves away from the traditional centralization decentralization model or policy experiment hypothesis to examine how Chinese local officials practices are simultaneously full of invention and improvisation and confined within the constraints and limits initially set on its inventions By so doing the book extends the application of Bourdieu s thinking tools to the arena of critical policy analysis through the establishment of the internal structure to separate habitus and the practice it generated thereby refuting any determinism or objectivism criticism to Bourdieu s most contested concept habitus This book will be of great interest to Bourdieusian scholars with particular interests in higher education and sociologists of education more broadly
