

When docking, the effect of winds and currents must be taken into consideration. A wind blowing toward the dock can be used to help drift the boat into position. If the wind is blowing away from the dock hard enough, it may become necessary to cast the anchor by line to secure to the dock. If possible, dock against the current.

If your hearing is permanent, it would be advisable to have one which protects your head in place through severe winds.

This diagram shows a typical mounting.

When dropping an anchor lower if slowly near the shore, float first. If an anchor is thrown overboard, it may quite easily become landed in the line and, consequently, lose its holding power. The length of line or chain to use depends largely upon weather conditions, size of boat, and the type of bottom. An anchor will hold quite well in mud but will drag easily through sand. If there is a rocky bottom the anchor has usually secured itself well, in shell, but will in some cases. If you are in a hurry and a heaped pile line will permit the anchor to be hooked up float first if landed under a rock. Most government charts indicate the type of bottom to be found.

Correct method of dropping anchor

The location of red and black buoys are often confusing to the novice boatoperator. The sign by which they are positioned is fully explained in the "Coast Guard Flag Buoy Handbook". However, the following information is given to familiarize the boaters with buoy colors and meanings.

As you proceed from outside, the bays will be numbered. The bays to your right, or black bays, will begin with the number 1 and continue with odd numbers while the first bay on the left will be number 2 and continue with even numbers.
