Clinical Presentation

Historically, Diabetes is a <sup>1</sup> chronic condition that is characterized by hyperglycemia and hyperosmolarity. It is a metabolic disorder that affects the body's ability to regulate blood sugar levels. The condition is caused by a deficiency of insulin, a hormone that allows the body's cells to absorb and use glucose for energy. Without insulin, glucose builds up in the blood, leading to a variety of complications, including damage to the heart, kidneys, and nerves.

In this case, the patient has been diagnosed with Diabetes Insipidus, a condition that is characterized by excessive thirst and urination. This is a rare condition that is caused by a deficiency of antidiuretic hormone (ADH), a hormone that helps the body retain water. Without ADH, the body loses too much water, leading to dehydration and a variety of complications, including damage to the kidneys and nerves.
