Containing decolonisation Matthew Bowser, 2025-09-02. This book examines British imperialism in late colonial Burma to study how imperialists attempted to protect their strategic and economic interests after decolonisation; they did so by supporting ethnonationalism. This process resembles the Cold War tactic of containment, and the book makes a crucial contribution to the study of modern imperialism by demonstrating the continuity between containment's late and neo-colonial manifestations. For Burma/Myanmar, it also explores the origin of the present-day military junta's racial regime; it emphasizes the protection of the ethno-religious majority from ethnic minority insurgency. The Rohingya people are currently suffering a genocide because of this racial regime. As the country endures civil war against the junta, this book highlights how ethnonationalists in the late colonial period first promoted this racial regime to seize power and prevent revolution, a process supported by British imperialists for their own ends.

Of the Nation Born Hameeda Hossain, Amena Mohsin, 2016-05-30. The Sexual Violence and Impunity in South Asia research project coordinated by Zubaan and supported by the International Development Research Centre brings together for the first time in the South Asian region a vast body of research on this important and yet silenced subject. Six country volumes, one each on Bangladesh, Nepal, Pakistan, Sri Lanka and two on India, as well as two standalone volumes comprising over 50 research papers and two book-length studies, detail the histories of sexual violence and look at the systemic institutional, societal, individual and community structures that work together to ensure that impunity for perpetrators is more or less inbuilt. As many of the authors argue, the very nature and conditions of sexual violence in the South Asian region lend themselves to a silencing process or, at a minimum, a reluctance to address it head-on, something that may at least partially explain why accountability for sexual violence remains such a distant horizon. This volume focuses on Bangladesh, a nation born in 1971 in a birth that was as marked by bloodshed as it was by sexual violence. The history of widespread sexual violence and incidents of sexual slavery, as well as the absence of accountability for the perpetrators, is by now well known. The essays here address the structural dynamics of impunity at the individual and societal levels, looking not only at the conditions that go into its creation.

but also the elements that fuel it They ask what helps it to become so embedded and point to its human global and national costs Together they explore the ways in which the women s movement and feminist practice have worked to demand accountability and recognition for the victims and survivors of sexual violence challenging the impunities embedded in the patriarchal structures of Bangladeshi society In doing so they bear witness to the continuing efforts of women s groups in Bangladesh to give this crucial issue the attention that it deserves for without that justice for victims and survivors will remain elusive
