

What answers did you give to the sets of questions associated with two of the Museum Display Areas referenced on the Investigation NR 2 worksheet? (Choose two of the six below):

Wetland Dioramas

- How does this wetland environment meet the needs of the birds represented here?
 - o It provides food such as insects, crustaceans, and fish to many species. The tall grasses, floodplain forests, and marsh provide unique migrating birds' habitats.
- What adaptations enable the birds portrayed in these particular habitats to survive? Choose three of the birds displayed and describe the adaptations of each.
 - o The pointed, narrow beak of the Stilt Sandpiper allows it to specifically pick up its preferred foods: invertebrates and seeds, both of which are small and often difficult to pick up.
 - o The webbed feet of the snow goose allow it to swim through the water, looking for food and avoiding the predators on land confidently and efficiently.
 - o the distinct look of the yellow-crowned night heron allows it to stand out and successfully attract mates.
- Some birds are found in both the fall and spring diorama. Name one species found in both. What is the advantage of blending in with the environment in the fall?
 - o The Dunlin, a member of the sandpiper family, is present in both. The advantage of blending in during the fall is that it may avoid and protect itself against predators. Rather than flocking together as migratory birds make their journeys, the year-round Dunlin uses their blending powers to protect themselves.

Endangered and Extinct

- Why is the Rainforest a vitally important natural resource for North American birds?
 - o Over 50% of birds found annually in Vermont spend their winters there. As birds migrate there, they depend on the habitat for food and other resources necessary for their survival.
- Of the birds portrayed in the endangered and extinct birds exhibit, what four or five environmental or human activities have figured in jeopardizing their survival?
 - o Deforestation, hunting, impounding of salt water, illegal wildlife trade
